Passage 1

Very old people do raise moral problems for almost everyone who comes into touch with them. Their values—this can't be repeated too often—are not necessarily our values. Physical comfort, cleanness and order are not necessarily the most important for them. The social services from time to time find themselves faced with a flat with going-bad food covered with dust on the table, and an old person lying alone on bed, taking no notice of anything. Is it doing harm to personal freedom to insist that they go to live with some of their relatives so that they might be taken better care of? Some social workers are the ones who clean up the dust, thinking we are in danger of carrying this idea of personal freedom to the point where serious risks are being taken with the health and safety of the old.

Indeed, the old can be easily hurt or harmed. The body is like a car—it needs more care as it gets older. You can carry this comparison right through to the provision of spare parts. But never forget that such operations are painful experiences, however good the results are. And at what point should you stop treating the old body? Is it right to try to push off death by using drugs to excite the forgetful old mind and to activate the old body, knowing that there is little hope? You cannot ask doctors or scientists to decide, because so long as they can see the technical opportunities, they will feel sure to have a try on the belief that while there's life, there's hope.

When you talk to the old people, however, you are forced to the conclusion that whether age is happy or unpleasant depends less on money or on health than it does on your ability to have fun.

11. From Paragraph 1, we can infer that _____.

- A. the human body can't be compared to a car
B. the older a person is, the more care he needs
C. too much emphasis has been put on old people's values

14. The word "it" in the last paragraph refers to _____.

- A. whether age is happy or unpleasant B. the conclusion you have come to

Passage 2

A gloomy afternoon saw me taking my routine path through that construction site. For the walker's convenience, a set of stone steps had been built, which were fairly steep. That was the place I found myself behind a husband and wife climbing up the steps with each other's support.

The couple seemed to be farmers in their forties. The wife in a red coat was walking with a stick, an empty trouser leg swaying below. With one hand on his shoulder, she leaned almost entirely on her husband, who carefully kept balance with her and carried her other stick. They limped their way upward with great difficulty. My curiosity urged me to overtake them and look back over my shoulder secretly. The glance sent a shiver through me, which produced a sensation I had never experienced before. The husband himself was also disabled—blind in both eyes! What struck me even more was the smile they both wore on their faces, such a happy smile as could only be seen from brides and bridegrooms. With few words between them, they smilingly helped each other struggle upwards.

Then I noticed there were patches on their clothes, and their cloth shoes were homemade, worn-out but tidy. How could such sweet smiles reconcile with the patched clothing or the physical handicap? I got quite puzzled. When they advanced far ahead I still couldn't tear my eyes away from them, I was moved and my heart filled with admiration.

At that moment I suddenly realized how superficial my idea of happiness had been! To me it had always been associated with wealth, fame and power, the poor and the lowly having no share of it. However, happiness can be found in very ordinary life. I witnessed it on the weather-beaten faces of the husband and wife who had shared happiness and misfortune together. There is always happiness when there is an unfailing mutual support between two persons in love.

16. How did the husband and wife climb up the steps?

- A. They didn't help each other.
- B. They climbed up the steps with ease.
- C. They limped their way upward with each other's support.
- D. They climbed up the steps depending on a stick.

17. What is the problem of the wife?

- A. One leg is missing.
- B. One eye is blind.
- C. She is a dumb person.
- D. She is a deaf.

18. What is the author's feeling when he saw the husband and wife?

- A. He was sad and his heart filled with sorry.
- B. He was moved and his heart filled with admiration.
- C. He was satisfied with their smiles.
- D. His heart was full of contempt.

19. Which of the following statements is TRUE?

- A. It was on a set of stone steps that I found myself behind a husband and wife.
- B. The husband and wife kept talking about something.
- C. They both wore smiles on their faces because they were bride and bridegroom.
- D. Their cloth shoes were homemade and very dirty.

20. What is the theme of the passage?

- A. Happiness is always associated with wealth and fame.
- B. Happiness is associated with health and beauty.
- C. Happiness is associated with handicap and disability.
- D. Happiness is associated with mutual love.

Passage 3

The multi-billion-dollar Western pop music industry is under fire. It is being blamed by the United Nations for the dramatic rise in drug abuse worldwide. "The most worrying development is a culture of drug-friendliness," says the UN's International Narcotics Control Board in a report released last year.

The 74-page study says the pop music, as a global industry, is by far the most influential trend-setter for young people of most cultures. "Some songs encourage people to take drugs. Certain pop stars make statements and set examples as if the use of drugs for non-medicinal purposes were a normal and acceptable part of a person's lifestyle," the study says.

Surprisingly, says the Board, the effect of drug-friendly pop music seems to survive despite the occasional shock of death by overdose. "Such incidents tend to be seen as an occasion to mourn the loss of a role model, and not an opportunity to face the deadly effect of drug use," it notes. Since the 1970s, several internationally famous singers and movie stars—including Elvis Presley, Janis Joplin, John Belushi, Jimi Hendrix, Jonathan Melvin and Andy Gibb—have died of either drug abuse or drug related illnesses. With the globalization of popular music, messages promoting drug abuse are now reaching beyond their countries of origin. "In most countries, the names of certain pop stars have become familiar to the members of every household," the study says.

The UN study also blames the media for its description of certain drug incidents, which encourages rather than prevents drug abuse. "Over the past years, we have seen how drug abuse is increasingly regarded as being acceptable or even attractive," says Hamid Ghodse, president of the Board. "Powerful pressure groups run political campaigns aimed at legalizing controlled drugs," he says. Ghodse also points out that all these developments have created an environment which is tolerant of or even favorable to drug abuse and spoils international drug prevention efforts currently under way.

The study focuses on demand reduction and prevention within an environment that has become tolerant of drug abuse. The Board calls on governments to do their legal and moral duties, and to act against the pro-drug messages of the youth culture to which young people increasingly are being exposed.

21. Which of the following statements does the author tend to agree with?

- A. The use of drugs for non-medicinal purposes is an acceptable part of a person's lifestyle.
- B. The spreading of pop music may cause drug abuse beyond country boundaries.
- C. No efforts have been made to prevent the spreading of drug abuse.
- D. Governments have no ability to act against the pro-drug messages of the youth culture.

22. The expression "under fire" in the first paragraph means _____.

- A. in an urgent situation
- B. facing some problems
- C. being criticized
- D. in trouble

23. From the third paragraph, we learn that the youth _____.

- A. tend to mourn the pop stars who died of overdose as role models
- B. are shocked to know even pop stars may abuse drugs
- C. try to face the deadly effect of drug use
- D. may stop abusing drugs

24. Which of the following is not mentioned as tolerant of drug abuse?

- A. The spreading of pop music.
- B. The media.
- C. Political campaigns run by powerful pressure groups.
- D. The low price of some drugs.

25. According to the passage, pop music _____.

- A. has a great influence on young people of most cultures
- B. attracts a small number of young people
- C. is not a profitable industry
- D. is alone responsible for drug abuse

Passage 4

Today, there is no such thing as a "typical" college student. People of all ages are enrolled in college.

Though the concept of college may be the same for all students, the stress and future goals are different. The college students most people think of usually range in age from 18-21, and are most often away from home for the first time. As a result, they now have choices and no parent to tell them what to do. They are responsible for their own lives, needing to learn to manage their time and find a job, while attending school. They enter this new world with the anticipation of freedom, fun and a good job after graduation.

The new faces in the college are usually 30 years old or older, and are returning to school after several years away. They are starting their college education, after raising a family and are now ready to do something for themselves. Their lives are considerably different from their younger classmates. They have been on their own for a while, and are concerned about family, responsibilities, work, and the adjustment of being back in school after some years. Most important to them are the hopes of a new career or a job promotion after they graduate.

Though they may come to college for different reasons, the result is the same. It is their chance to make a better life for themselves or their families. As the younger generation is looking for freedom in their lives, those who are returning to school also see freedom. The same opportunities were not available 20 years ago.

So in our colleges and universities, there is a new sense of hope and dreams. Where once stood only the youth of our future, they are now joined by people of all ages who share the dreams of a better life.

Part IV Translation (15 points)

Directions: Translate the following passage into Chinese and put your translation on the ANSWER SHEET.

The 2011 is a historic moment in Chinese urbanization process, when the urban population surpassed the rural population for the first time. During the next 20 years, it is estimated that about 350 million rural population will move to cities. Such large-scale of urbanization is both a challenge and an opportunity to the urban traffic. The Chinese government has always been advocating "people-oriented" developing concept, emphasizing that people should travel by buses instead of by private cars. It also calls for the construction of "resource saving and environment friendly" society. With this explicit goal, China can have a better-planned urbanization process, and therefore divert more investment to the development of safe, clean and economical transportation system.
