Part II Reading Comprehension (40 points)

Directions: There are 4 passages in this part. Each passage is followed by 5 questions or unfinished statements. For each of them there are 4 choices marked A, B, C and D. Choose the best one and mark your answer on the ANSWER SHEET with a single bar through the centre of the letter that indicates your choice.

Passage 1

If Dakota Access Pipeline(输油管道) is completed, it will carry nearly half a million barrels of oil across four states every day. Energy Transfer Partners (ETP), a Texas-based company behind the $3.8 billion project hopes to finish construction this year. But the Standing Rock Sioux, an American Indian tribe(部落), is determined to stop the 1,172-mile pipeline from being built. Both sides show no signs of backing down.

The Dakota Access Pipeline was announced in 2014. A section of it will run near the Standing Rock Sioux reservation. A reservation is an area of land set aside for American Indians. The tribe says the construction threatens to destroy historical areas and ancient burial sites. They also say the pipeline could pollute their main water source, the Missouri River. In April, the Standing Rock Sioux began a protest against the project. They camped at the construction site. Since then, thousands of people, including people from other American Indian tribes, have traveled to the site to join the protest.

ETP says that the pipeline will have built-in measures to protect against oil leaks. Workers will also monitor it remotely, and will be able to close valves(阀) within three minutes if leaks are detected.

American Indians have been staging a nonviolent protest for months. The protest took a turn last week when police were called to keep the peace between protesters and armed security guards hired by the company. Twenty-eight people have been arrested since then and charged with interfering with the pipeline construction.

11. Which of the following is the main idea of the passage?

A. The Dakota Access Pipeline will create more markets for oil and gas.

B. The Dakota Access Pipeline will create many job opportunities.

C. American Indians oppose the construction of an oil pipeline.

D. American Indians fight for equal voting rights.

12. Why do American Indians protest against the construction of this pipeline?

- A. Because it will cost up to $3.8 billion.
- B. Because it threatens the region's water supply.
- C. Because it will make many people lose their jobs.
- D. Because it will force many people to leave their homes.

13. According to the passage, the workers can _____ in case of pipeline leaks.

- | | |
|-----------------------------------|--|
| A. report to the local government | B. ask people to leave the leak affected areas |
| C. call 911 | D. close valves |

14. According to the passage, which of the following statements is NOT TRUE?

- A. This pipeline will cross four states.
- B. This pipeline is 1,172 miles long.
- C. All the protesters are from the Standing Rock Sioux.
- D. Neither side of the dispute is willing to compromise.

15. What can we infer about the protest of the American Indians from the passage?

- A. It has caused serious violence and social chaos.
- B. It has lasted for a relatively long period of time.
- C. It has been supported by the local government.
- D. It has forced ETP to stop the pipeline construction.

Passage 2

From the beginning of jazz, the trumpet was the king. The trumpet players were often the leaders, and in any case they played the leading role in the music. It was trumpet players like Bolden, Oliver, Armstrong, and Beiderbecke who got the glory. But by the early years of the 1930's a relatively new instrument was beginning to push the trumpet aside. This was the saxophone.

The saxophone was invented by a Belgian, Adolph Sax, in 1840. Sax was trying to create an instrument which combined the carrying power of a brass instrument with the speed and facility of a clarinet. What he got was something quite different, an instrument that indeed could be played with speed, but which had a rather muted sound. It has never been much used in symphony orchestras, and during the early days of jazz was rarely used. But by 1910 dance orchestras were beginning to use the saxophone as a novelty instrument. It looked funny, especially when the saxophonist had several different sizes of them lined up in front of him. And by about 1920 jazz musicians were beginning to take an interest in the instrument. For the most part, they played it very badly. Early jazz saxophone playing is sometimes quite painful to hear. But very quickly some players began to master the instrument. Three who did so were Bud Freeman, tenor saxophonist, who was part of gang around Beiderbecke's sidekick, Frankie Trumbauer. But it was yet another player who was to really demonstrate the possibilities of the instrument. This was Coleman Hawkins.

16. According to the passage, which instrument was the most important in early jazz?

- | | | | |
|-----------------|------------------|-------------------|---------------|
| A. The trumpet. | B. The clarinet. | C. The saxophone. | D. The piano. |
|-----------------|------------------|-------------------|---------------|

17. Which of the following people played the trumpet?

- | | | | |
|-------------|-----------------|-------------|---------------|
| A. Freeman. | B. Beiderbecke. | C. Rollini. | D. Trumbauer. |
|-------------|-----------------|-------------|---------------|

18. How was the saxophone named?

- A. It was named after the person who invented it.
- B. It was named after the place where it was first made.
- C. It was named after the type of sound it produced.
- D. It was named after the materials used to make it.

19. According to the passage, why was the saxophone considered a "novelty instrument" in dance orchestras around 1910?

- A. Because it produced a completely new sound.
- B. Because it was cheaper than other instruments.
- C. Because its appearance was amusing and unusual.
- D. Because it was very easy to learn and play.

20. What can we learn about the saxophone from the passage?

- A. It was originally designed to be used in symphony orchestras.
- B. Its sound was louder than that of brass instruments.
- C. It was first used in jazz music earlier than in dance orchestras.
- D. It took some time for jazz musicians to play it well.

Passage 3

Some prisoners in the United States create works of art. Prison art is sold in art galleries(画廊) in the Washington D. C. area. The profits are split among the artists and the Prisons Foundation, a not-for-profit group in the nation's capital. The Prisons Foundation supports the arts in prisons and programs designed to help keep people out of jail.

Some prisoners create pictures filled with images of natural beauty. It helps them remember the world they left behind. Dennis Sobin served twelve years in prison. He created the Prisons Foundation while he was jailed. He said: "Art is a cure and remedy for prisoners. And prison art is often full of emotion." Dennis Sobin now owns the Watergate Gallery, which sells prisoner art. He said: "There's a lot of sensitivity in this art. You can see what people are thinking."

Brian Driggers was released from prison recently. He created a lot of art during his eight years in prison. Some of it is in the Crime and Punishment Museum in Washington. He used a pen in his art. Paint and brushes were not permitted in the prison because they could be used for body art. He told us about what he used to create a picture of his wife.

He said, "I created the brush out of my own hair. I would cut a lot of my hair out, tie it up with thread, and then use a pen. And then paint with instant coffee. You could mix it down with different levels of water to create different tones and use it as a watercolor medium."

Mr. Driggers also created a picture of himself using color chalks. He said: "The shapes are broken apart, and what that implies to is my life had completely fallen apart, and the meaning behind that is for me to come back together again."

21. Some prisoners like to create art of natural beauty because _____.

- | | |
|--|--|
| A. prisons are usually built in the wild | B. they miss their homes and families |
| C. they are unable to get close to it | D. they have no access to other themes |

22. According to the founder of the Prisons Foundation, prison art _____.

- | | |
|----------------------------------|---------------------------------|
| A. is more popular among artists | B. can reflect the real society |
| C. can make people think deeply | D. is meaningful and emotional |

23. Mr. Driggers used coffee and the brush made of his own hair to paint the picture of his wife, because _____.

- A. he missed his wife so much
- B. paint and brushes are not allowed in prison
- C. he punished himself for he had let his wife down
- D. he had nothing else to paint in prison

24. Mr. Driggers thought the meaning of his own picture was that _____.

- A. his future would be unimaginable
- B. he would change himself and start with a clean new life
- C. his life had been completely ruined
- D. he would be released from the prison soon

25. We can learn from the passage that prison art is _____.

- A. a good way to help prisoners go back to society
- B. very valuable in the art market
- C. a way for prisoners to pass time
- D. a way to train famous artists

Passage 4

It is the world's fourth-most-important food crop, after maize, wheat and rice. It provides more calories, more quickly, using less land and in a wider range of climates than any other plant. It is, of course, the potato.

The United Nations has hoped that greater awareness of the merits of potatoes will contribute to the achievement of its Millennium Development Goals, by helping to reduce poverty and promote economic development.

The potato promoted economic development by supporting the Industrial Revolution in England in the 19th century. It provided a cheap source of calories and was easy to cultivate, so it liberated workers from the land. Potatoes became popular in the north of England, as people there specialized in livestock farming and domestic industry, while farmers in the south concentrated on wheat production. By a happy accident, the concentrated industrial activity in the regions where coal was readily available, and a potato-driven population boom provided ample workers for the new factories. Friedrich Engels even declared that the potato was the equal of iron for its "historically revolutionary role".

In the form of French fries, served alongside burgers and Coca-Cola, potatoes are now a symbol of globalization. This is quite a change given the skepticism which first greeted them on their arrival in the Old World in the 16th century. They were variously thought to be fit only for animals, to be associated with the devil or to be poisonous. They took hold in 18th-century Europe only when war and famine meant there was nothing else to eat; people then realized just how useful and reliable they were. As Adam Smith, one of the potato's many admirers, observed at the time, "The very general use which is made of potatoes in these kingdoms as food for man is a convincing proof that the prejudices of a nation with regard to diet, however deeply rooted, are by no means unconquerable." Mashed, fried, boiled and roasted, a humble potato changed the world, and people everywhere should celebrate it.

26. Paragraph 3 mainly describes _____.

- A. why the potato became popular in the north of England
- B. why the potato was important in England's population growth
- C. how the potato contributed to England's industrial development
- D. how the potato helped improve England's working conditions

27. Friedrich Engels's words show that he _____.

- A. thought highly of the potato
- B. took the potato too seriously
- C. underestimated the role of the potato
- D. lacked the basic knowledge of the potato

Part IV Translation (15 points)

Directions: Translate the following passage into Chinese and put your translation on the ANSWER SHEET.

Of course a certain amount of dependence on others is not only good, but necessary. Children must be dependent on their parents; and the weak must depend on the strong, and the sick on the well. And in a sense, all of us, even the most independent and self-reliant, are dependent on one another. At any rate, in civilized society, it is impossible for anyone to make all the things he needs. No man can produce all the food and clothes he wants. He can only produce one or two things, and must get all the others by exchange or purchase from others, who are doing the same thing. So in a community everyone is dependent on the service of others, while he himself contributes to the needs of others.

Part V Writing (15 points)

Directions: You are to write in no less than 100 words on the topic of "Finding a Job in a Big City or a Small Town?" You should base your composition on the clues given in Chinese below. Write your composition on the ANSWER SHEET.

Clues / 写作提示:

1. 现在许多大学毕业生都想在大城市、大公司找工作，甚至为此而等上几年也在所不惜，你对此如何看待？

2. 请举例说明你的观点。
